History

The palace complex consists of a spacious square courtyard surrounded by a wall, a large hall, an open verandah, rooms, a well, a garden, springs, and a tank surrounded by bathrooms. Inside the larger hall are two rooms on either side. In the open verandah are six rooms. Each room has a door. Adjoining the open verandah is another spacious square hall. There are four rooms attached to this hall. At the back of this hall is a courtyard, and a well at the centre and kitchen room granary, etc. To the north of the palace is a tank surrounded by a plat form. Around the platform is pauli wall and bathrooms. The fort is built on a large plane land. It has gateways on the east and west. The exterior fort wall which is between the two gateways has semicircular bastions. Around this wall is a deep moat. A tank called Anehonda is outside the east gateway. A zig-gag road leads to the Easter of gateway.
